American Alliance of Museums

Museums On Call: How Museums Are Addressing Health Issues

INTRODUCTION

For years, museums have demonstrated their public value as educational providers, community anchors and stewards of our national heritage. They've also earned a reputation for driving tourism, creating jobs, attracting businesses to the community and serving as a source of immense civic and community pride.

As society has changed, so has the work of museums. Museums are facilitating job training programs, celebrating cultural diversity and awareness, teaching English as a Second Language classes and serving as locations for supervised visits through the family court system.

But health care?

In fact, museums are playing a significant role in many health care issues.

The American Alliance of Museums has assembled this report to showcase some of the important ways that museums are contributing to health care—helping patients, training medical professionals and educating the public about health and wellness issues.

This report provides an introduction to 10 aspects of the health care field in which museums are making significant contributions:

- Alzheimer's
- autism
- disease prevention
- health literacy
- hospital outreach
- medical training
- mental health
- military and veterans health
- nutrition and wellness
- visual impairment
